The 21st May, 1975, marked the Broadway premiere of Michael Bennett and Nicholas Dante's musical A Chorus Line. When the curtain fell on stage for the last time on 28 April, 1990, the piece had been performed 6,137 times, breaking all records. To date it is the longest lasting Broadway American musical ever. At the Gerald Schoenfeld Theatre in New York on 5th October, 2005, the curtain went up on a new production. In just 19 weeks the play had already recouped its production costs of $ 8 million and, after six months, the theatre box-office had taken $ 16 million. A Chorus Line is still a hit and the film is not just a record of this revival, it also looks back on the making of the original musical, and on the 18 dancers who came together in a studio in Manhattan on 18th January, 1974, to rehearse, under Michael Bennett's direction, a musical that was to evolve from their own stories and experiences.

DIRECTORS' BIOGRAPHIES:

James D. Stern was born in Chicago in 1957. He has worked as a producer in Hollywood and on Broadway. His stage productions include performances of Stomp, Hairspray and The Producers. He began working in the film industry in the mid-1990s. Every Little Step is the third documentary he has co-directed with Del Deo. Adam Del Deo was born in Portland in 1970. Largely a producer of feature films, he has made three documentaries as co-director with Stern.
