Mumbai: Actor Amol Gupte and noted film critic Daniel Kothenschulte have taken it upon themselves to train a bunch of fresh college film students on the finer nuances of film criticism. The exercise will be undertaken at the Mumbai Academy of Moving Image (MAMI) Film Festival which has decided to create a platform for these first-timers. Amol says, "I have gladly agreed to be a part of the MAMI Initiative, 'Mumbai Young Critics'. I have rescheduled my timings (he is shooting for his first feature film). I will be meeting the kids on October 27 at the workshop which will be conducted by Daniel Kothenschulte."

"The 'Mumbai Young Critics' will be a group of 20 young film critics who have been short-listed from media colleges of Mumbai by film critic Rashid Irani and film scholar and professor Ashok Rane based on their reviews of foreign language films -- Lemming and Mishima. These young critics will now be mentored by noted independent German critic Kothen Schulte over a period of three days from today to October 28 to form the 'Mumbai Young Critics Jury'," says a spokesperson for the film festival.

The young jury will watch and review the movies scheduled at the MAMI film festival and select the best film which will then go on to receive the 'Mumbai Young Critics Jury Award.'
